MINUTES OF SILENCE MARK ANNIVERSARY OF MICHAEL BROWN'S DEATH IN FERGUSON

FERGUSON, Mo. One year after the shooting that cast greater scrutiny on how police interact with black communities, the father of slain 18-year-old Michael Brown Jr. led a march in Ferguson, Mo., on Sunday after a crowd of hundreds observed 4½ minutes of silence.

Those who gathered to commemorate Brown began their silence at 12:02 p.m., the time he was killed, for a length of time that symbolized the 4½ hours that his body lay in the street after he was killed. Two doves were released at the end. Police largely remained away from the ceremony.

Michael Brown Sr. held hands with others to lead the march, which started at the site where his son, who was black and unarmed, was fatally shot by Ferguson officer Darren Wilson on Aug. 9, 2014. A grand jury and the U.S. Department of Justice declined to prosecute Wilson, who resigned in November, but the shooting touched off a national "Black Lives Matter" movement.

Pausing along the route at a permanent memorial for his son, Michael Brown Sr. said, "Miss vou."

He had thanked supporters before the march for not allowing what happened to his son to be "swept under the carpet."

Later Sunday, a few hundred people turned out at Greater St. Mark Family Church in a ceremony to remember Brown, with his father joining other relatives sitting behind the pulpit.

Michael Brown Sr. had also led a parade involving several hundred people on Saturday. He said his family is still grieving, but he believes his son's legacy can be seen in the increased awareness of police shootings, and renewed skepticism when officers describe their side of events leading up to those shootings.

In New York, demonstrators lay on a Brooklyn pavement, maintaining their silence for a few moments before rising and joining others marching into Manhattan for a later rally.

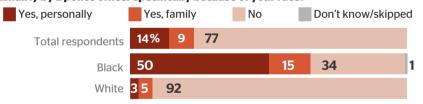

The anniversary has also sparked renewed protests, though much smaller than those a year ago. Over a hundred people gathered outside Ferguson police headquarters Saturday night, but despite some tense moments in which the crowd taunted police, no arrests were made.

Organizers of some of the weekend activities have pledged a day of civil disobedience on Monday but have not yet offered specific details

Why I'm booting bores clogging my Twitter feed

It's time for a fresh start. I'm puraina the

unhealthy waste to make way for inspiring, worth-

I blame myself. honestly. For thinking a single one of these accounts I follow on Twitter would actually provide even an ounce of value or creative commentary on a subject matter.

Instead, they're treating the platform like it's a free-for-all circle jerk where the only rule is to see how many times they can regurgitate meaningless excrement (read: tweet) in a 30-minute span.

So, I've decided to unfollow 'em all.

Every single one. I scroll aimlessly through my feed each morning, utterly disoriented by how brainless everything I'm reading is.

It's time for a fresh start. I'm purging the unhealthy waste to make way for inspiring, worthwhile entities.

After all, I use Twitter to consume news fast. Being up-to-date and well-read even if that means taking in a BuzzFeed headline or two—is important to me.

Being the guy who can jump into any real-life conversation about a current event and provide his take is something I cling to.

To reiterate: I said "real-life conversation" (as in, face-to-face) and not "a Twitter debate with people you don't actually know to validate what you call a 'unique voice.'"

I refuse to be that guy at the bar with his friends who's leaned back in his chair, removed from the conversation completely, because he didn't even (at least) watch the highlights of Donald Trump defining the word "asshole" at the GOP debate on Thursday night.

But maybe you're wondering what specifically enrages me about most of the accounts I've stupidly followed? Welp, here goes.

Your use of Twitter like it's a text message conservation that you want everyone to see. I have no need to converse with you on Twitter. Don't @mention me if we have each other's phone number. Ever.

Or subtweeting about people you know. I guarantee that's not what Jack Dorsev intended when he co-founded the social network.

Or asking for retweets in any context whatsoever.

Or your constantly retweeting the same account over. And over again. If I wanted to see that news account, I would follow it myself.

Or attaching a GIF to a tweet that just reads "Mondays have me feelin' like ...'

Or brands that still use #FollowFriday on EVERY. SINGLE. FRIDAY.

Or people who don't see how self-involved they are with constant #humblebrag violations. "Ugh! My trainer is making me eat a cheat meal and I'm soooo not even craving one! #eatclean" Yep. That's an actual tweet I've read in the past. And a photo of salmon was attached, to boot.

I feel like my Twitter feed while entities. is the one part of my life that truly shows how I've changed over the years.

Sure, pictures do that, but the true you is who you choose to follow. Seven years ago, when I followed most of these dickweeds, I was a completely different person.

It's really glaring to me in a way that nothing else is. And I hate myself for it.

So, here we go. Let's start trimming the fat with a [bleep]ing chainsaw. Besides? Unless you're a news organization, a celebrity or a wannabe comedian who wants to crack jokes to faceless avatars about a presidential debate in real time, Twitter is pretty much dead anyway, so don't take it personal.

FACING RENT REALITY

CHICAGO'S MINIMUM WAGE HIKE DIDN'T SUDDENLY MAKE LIVING IN THE CITY AFFORDABLE

By Caitlin Wilson | FOR REDEYE

Just because Chicago's minimum wage inched up to $10 doesn't mean the city is now a more affordable place for low-wage workers to live. Consider this: An average one-bedroom apartment in the Chicago metropolitan area runs about $922 monthly. That means a renter—or several renters combined—would need to earn $17.73 to afford a one-bedroom apartment in the city and suburbs, according to the National Low Income Housing Coalition report called "Out of Reach."

Big picture, that's about $3,083 monthly, or $37,000 annually.

Data from a study by the organization Generation Progress show that more young people currently are living on minimum wage than in previous generations. In 1979, about 39 percent of minimum-wage workers were between the ages of 20 and 34. In 2011, about 46 percent were between 20 and 34.

Today, about 71 percent of minimum wage workers are Millennials, said Eve Rips, Midwest director of the advocacy group Young Invincibles. She said that one in five Millennials will end up having to move back in with their parents sometime during their young adulthood because paying rent becomes a burden too heavy to bear.

Vanessa Lewis, 26, is one of those Millennials who has ended up back at home. After living with a roommate on the South Side (where their rent was only $400 per person), Lewis wanted to go solo and live in a safer neighborhood closer to her approximately 30-hour-per-week minimum wage job at Walgreens in Lakeview and her second job at UPS in the South Loop, where she works roughly part time at $16 an hour. At the very most, that would put Lewis' annual income at about $29,760, or $2,480 monthly.

"The whole roommate thing, I'm over that. I did it, I'm ready to have my own [place]," Lewis said.

But before she is able to make that leap,

Lewis said, she needs to save up some money, which is how she came to live with her mother in Albany Park. She has been looking for a studio apartment in Uptown or Edgewater, where she says she thinks she can afford about $700 a month in rent. Fair market rent for a studio in the Chicago metropolitan area—defined in the low-income housing coalition report as the Chicago, Naperville and Joliet area—is $812.

Diomedis Aleman, 21, and her husband moved in with his parents in Humboldt Park last year and have ended up staying because paying rent there is much cheaper than it would be if they had their own apartment—

MORE MILLENNIALS LIVING AT HOME

By Samantha Masunaga

LOS ANGELES TIMES

The economy might be recovering, but Millennials are still largely living with their parents, one survey says.

The nation's 18- to 34-year-old population is less likely to be living independently of their families and establishing their own households than they were during the recession, according to a recent report by the Pew Research Center.

In early 2015, the report said, about 42.2 million Millennials, or 67 percent, lived independently, compared with 42.7 million Millennials, or 71 percent, before the recession in 2007.

Since 2010, the percentage of Millennials moving back in with their parents has increased from 24 percent to 26 percent.

This comes as the Millennial population is growing. In 2015, there are nearly 3 million more young adults between the ages of 18 and 34 than there were in 2007, according to the report.

The stagnation in Millennial households has a significant effect on the housing market, from Realtors to landlords to construction firms to cable companies, said Richard Fry, senior economist at the Pew Research Center and author of the report.

"It's contributing to why the housing market has been a real laggard in the recovery," he said. "There's a lot of spending that is associated with forming your own households."

Part of the problem can be linked to student loan debt, which can hinder independent living, according to the report. Though college-educated Millennials are more likely to live independently than those with only a high-school education, the trend for both groups has still decreased slightly since the recession.

What's affordable?

Housing wage is the wage a person would have to earn for a 40-hour workweek to afford the fair market rent price. The numbers below apply to the Chicago metropolitan area—defined in the National Low Income Housing Coalition report as the Chicago, Naperville and Joliet area.

	HOUSING WAGE	Fair market rent
STUDIO	$15.62 /HR	$812/MO
ONE-BEDROOM	$17.73 /HR	$922/MO
TWO-BEDROOM	$21.02 /HR	$1,093/MO
THREE-BEDROOM	$26.79 /HR	$1,393/MO
FOUR-BEDROOM	$31.23 /HR	$1,624/MO

About 35 PERCENT of Chicago metro area residents are renters.

The average renter in the Chicago metro area earns $16.46 AN HOUR.

There are approximately 84,000 WORKERS in Illinois making at or below the federal minimum wage of $7.25 AN HOUR.

only $400 a month.

But Aleman said that even though the rent is affordable with her in-laws, the situation is not ideal. She wishes she had more space for herself than just a bedroom—a kitchen and the autonomy to run her own household. Plus, she'd like to move to Lakeview, closer to work.

While she and her husband have been looking for apartments and hope to move by the end of the summer, the search has proven difficult. She makes $5.45 an hour—the tipped minimum wage—plus tips working at the Gaslight bar in Lincoln Park on Fridays and Saturdays and at John Barleycorn, where she works lunch-time shifts during the week. Aleman estimates that she makes about $2,800 a month in total with her wages and tips, and her husband makes about $3,600 per month in wages and tips working as a bartender, also at Gaslight.

The couple's combined incomes, at about $6,400 a month, would be enough to live in a one-bedroom apartment at $922 per month or a two-bedroom apartment at $1,093 affordably. But, as Rips points out, rent in certain neighborhoods of Chicago can be much higher than in other areas, especially on the Near North Side, where Aleman and her husband hope to live. On top of that, both incomes rely heavily on tips and can be unpredictable.

Aleman said she thinks that between the two of them, they could afford to pay about $1,500 a month for an apartment.

Aleman and her husband could get a roommate, as Rips says many other Millennial renters have done, to divvy up costs even more. But the couple wants to be self-sufficient.

"I don't want to live with a roommate," Aleman said. "I got married so young—I want to live with my husband, I want to have a family."

As a whole, Illinois ranks as the 17th most

"I don't want to live with a roommate. I got married so young—I want to live with my husband, I want to have a family."

—Diomedis Aleman, a 21-year-old living with her husband's parents while they save for a place of their own expensive state for housing in the country, with $18.78 an hour needed to afford a two-bedroom statewide. Hawaii is the most expensive at $31.61, and Arkansas is the least expensive at $12.95.

The difficulties in finding affordable housing stem from the twin problems of low wages and high rents, said Elina Bravve, senior research analyst at the National Low Income Housing Coalition. Increasing the minimum wage is a slow process politically, she said, and most housing developers want to target middle- and high-income renters when building multifamily housing units.

The disparity is not a problem that Bravve thinks can solve itself, and she said assistance programs will always be warranted.

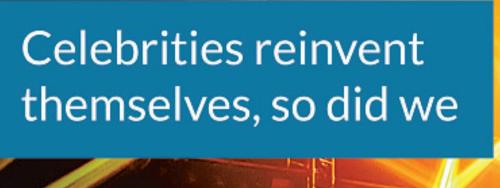

"There will always be a need," Bravve said.
"There will always be low-wage workers of some sort. There will always be people ... who live off Social Security income or [Supplemental] Security Income. There will be senior citizens. There will always be some folks with disabilities who will need some affordability to get by."

Ruling due in Slender Man stabbing case

A decision is due this week in the case of two 13-year-old Wisconsin girls accused of stabbing a classmate to please online horror character Slender Man. Each girl faces a charge of attempted first-degree homicide in adult court and could spend up to 65 years in the state prison system if convicted. Should Waukesha County Circuit Judge Michael Bohren move them into the juvenile system, they could be held for only five years and all records of the proceedings would be sealed, giving them a chance to restart their lives. KANE'S HOMETOWN LEFT IN DISBELIEF

By Philip Hersh | CHICAGO TRIBUNE

Tom Farkas planned to mark the presence of the Stanley Cup in the Buffalo, N.Y., area by putting a big mural of Patrick Kane in the window of his hockey equipment store, Great Skate, in suburban Amherst on Friday.

But when reports of a law enforcement investigation into an incident at Kane's house in Hamburg became public Thursday, Farkas began to have reservations about the timing of displaying the mural created by Bauer Hockey, one of Kane's sponsors.

"Patrick Kane is an important part of my business," Farkas said. "He's an icon. I'd rather have him on the window than somebody else."

Bauer spokesman Steve Jones said the company had not asked retailers either to remove or keep up any imagery of Kane while it monitors the situation. Farkas chose not to display the mural for now.

No matter the outcome of the investigation, the greatest hockey player to come from Buffalo might find his reputation forever sullied, even in his hometown.

"I don't want to believe anything I hear, but it's disheartening," Farkas said.

Especially given the timing.

Saturday was Kane's day to celebrate with the Cup, and while in the past he has taken the Cup around Buffalo, this time he celebrated at a barbecue with family and friends, according to the Tribune.

According to hockey-reference.com, there have been 18 NHL players born in Buffalo. Only one other, Todd Marchant, has won a Stanley Cup. Kane, by contrast, is seemingly on a path toward the Hall of Fame.

"Patrick has gotten huge crowds when he brought back the Cup in part because the Sabres never have won it," said Pete Gallivan, a reporter for NBC affiliate WGRZ-TV. "He is our Stanley Cup champion."

But Kane's time with the trophy this weekend was out of public view.

Mike Schopp, a host on Buffalo sports-talk radio station WGR, said Kane was largely responsible for the explosive recent growth of youth hockey in the area.

"Here's a son of South Buffalo, drafted No. 1 overall, winning the Stanley Cup," Schopp said. "He is super popular."

Because no charges have been filed and local police did not confirm the investigation on the record until Friday, Schopp chose circumspection and decided not to take calls from fans about Kane on his four-hour show Thursday and Friday.

"With the amount of information out there, this has probably done some damage to his reputation already," Schopp said. "If he is charged and there is a trial that lasts a long time, the more damage is done to him.

"If he is not charged, everyone will proceed carefully, and fans will want to give him some benefit of the doubt."

For better or worse, Kane's past behavior will undoubtedly factor into that equation, no matter the outcome of the investigation and any potential ensuing legal proceedings. Mike Answeeney is the executive board president of the Buffalo Regals youth hockey association, for which Answeeney said Kane played three seasons at the peewee level. Answeeney said he had never talked with players in his youth hockey organization about how they perceived Kane's earlier transgressions. He has noticed adults are reacting differently to this one.

"A lot of people who were his supporters in the past are shaking their heads," Answeeney said.

At Stroh's Tavern in Angola, a bar 100 yards from Lake Erie beaches, the lunch crowd Thursday was paying no attention to the TV until Kane's face appeared.

Everyone fell silent when an ESPN anchor began speaking about the investigation involving Kane. The bartender grabbed the remote to turn up the volume. One older patron threw back his beer and inched closer.

"Wow," a man at the bar said to no one in particular. "What do you say about that?"

No one said anything.

Entering their four-game weekend series against defending World Series champion San Francisco, the Cubs were a half-game behind the Giants in the NL wild-card race. Now things look a whole lot different.

"I'm still looking for that late-inning swagger, and I think it's almost there, where if things get a little freaky we're still OK," Cubs manager Joe Maddon said after Saturday's win. "That's the next step. But overall, man, you can't complain."

Pitcher Jake Arrieta was the star in the series finale Sunday, a 2-0 Cubs win. Not only did he throw 7 2/3 shutout innings, lowering RECORDS ENTERING THURSDAY his ERA from 2.50 to 2.38, but he tripled and scored a run. The Cubs' schedule is favorable this week, too, with three games against lastplace Milwaukee followed by three vs. the struggling White Sox.

You were saying?

Trash-talking the most decorated swimmer in Olympic history is not such a good idea.

After spending all day digesting Chad le Clos' taunts from halfway around the world, Phelps beat the South African's time from the FINA World Championships to win the 100-meter butterfly at the Phillips 66 National Championships on Saturday.

His time of 50.45 seconds was 11-hundredths of a second faster than le Clos' time about eight hours earlier in Kazan, Russia, where he won the world championship in 50.56.

"The comments were interesting," Phelps said, with a knowing grin. "It just fuels me. If you want to do it, go for it. I welcome it."

Rogers Park eyed for new Frankie Knuckles mural

By Tracy Swartz | CHICAGO TRIBUNE

A tribute honoring Frankie Knuckles, known as the godfather of house music, may have found a new Chicago home.

DJ Michael Tupak said he plans to meet with Mile of Murals, a public art initiative in Rogers Park, this week to discuss a spot for a new Knuckles mural. The last mural, created after Knuckles' death in 2014, was recently painted over as part of renovations to the Logan Square building showcasing the artwork.

"We want to properly locate this thing," said Tupak, who worked on the first mural along with BboyB, Flash ABC and other Chicago graffiti artists. Tupak, 32, said he's been offered two other spaces on the South Side for the mural but the Rogers Park location is the most promising.

Ana Bermúdez, marketing and communications manager for the Rogers Park Business Alliance, which sponsors Mile of Murals, said she contacted the tribute's organizers to see if they would consider Rogers Park as a future home.

"I think it would be a great addition to the project because of Frankie's historical and cultural contribution to Chicago and it would be an honor to have him memorialized here in Rogers Park," Bermúdez said in an email to the Tribune.

Tupak, who lives in Jefferson Park, is trying to raise $2,000 through a GoFundMe crowdfunding campaign for painting supplies and food for the volunteers during the project. The goal had been reached by Sunday afternoon. Tupak said any leftover money will go to the Frankie Knuckles Foundation, a cultural and educational group.

Tupak said the intention is to re-create the original mural, which features a likeness of Knuckles with a vinyl record behind him as a halo, but if the new space is larger, organizers may add to it in some way that has yet to be determined. It took about four days in May 2014 to paint the original mural on the rooftop along the CTA Blue Line, Tupak said.

Knuckles died from complications of diabetes in March 2014 at the age of 59. He was long credited with revolutionizing the club culture in the '70s and '80s.

Churro y chocolate ($10) at Salero

621 W. Randolph St. 312-466-1000

If I could end every meal with a churro, I absolutely would. The modern Spanish restaurant plates three crispy, cinnamon and sugar-studded churros with dots of whipped salted chocolate, espresso pudding and milk jam. The end result looks like abstract art, but you probably won't have any problem tearing it apart. Mix and match dips for unbeatable flavor combinations. My only critique: Sharing with a friend meant splitting the last churro, which was a massive heartbreak, --morgan olsen

Pink Unicorn ($10) at The Winchester

1001 N. Winchester Ave. 773-698-8703

My eyes are trained to scan cocktail menus for tequila, and with a fun name like Pink Unicorn, this drink was a no-brainer. But don't let the name fool you, it's not another sickeningly sweet summer margarita. Aperol and grapefruit juice are blended with a dash of habanero shrub bitters for a spicy, tart flavor that's insanely refreshing. The glass is punctuated with a pink peppercorn salt rim that's both Instagrammable and practical (I licked off every flake before my last sip). -m.o.

Kimchi fries ($6.50) at bopNgrill

921 W. Belmont Ave. 773-799-8868 6604 N. Sheridan Road 773-654-3224

The burgers at this "Diners. Drive-Ins and Dives"-certified spot will fill you up fast, but for the love of all things fried, don't skip this side. Flaky fries are topped with a mound of caramelized kimchi, cheese sauce, bacon, scallions and sesame seeds. If you're ordering with friends, you'll only need one basket of these super-decadent fries to go around. -m.o.

horoscopes

Leo July 23-Aug. 22 You are presenting yourself in an entirely new light, which will be extremely attractive to others. The only caveat? Someone from your past might want you a bit more than you want him or her. Oh well.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22 New relationships will form until September 2016 with the power to lift you up in magical ways. If you're single, you might meet someone extra special this year. If attached, your relationship looks brighter than ever. Enjoy!

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23 A friend might be the key to turning your love life around, so pay attention to what your pals are saving.

such as advice or an offer to set you up with someone. Going with the flow can be the best decision you make for your love life this week.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21 Expect a breath of fresh air in your love and social life this week. A possibility is that, since your social life is about to get busier and happier, you will be in the position to mingle with plenty of interesting souls. Keep your heart open.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21 Communication might be extra fuzzy with your partner this Wednesday. Avoid getting locked into any decisions, because neither one of you will feel that you've got your facts straight.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19 Intimate matters between you and your partner continue to be the focus. Happily, this week appears to bring progress in at least one of the areas vou've been struggling with. Solutions should begin to appear after Friday.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18 A conversation between you and your partner on Thursday might lead to a fresh start in the relationship area for both of you by Friday. If you've felt less than satisfied, suddenly you'll get this feeling that maybe love can conquer all.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20 Anticipate a change in the possibilities ahead for you and someone close. If dating, you two could decide it's time to make a stronger commitment. If vou're in a sour relationship, as long as you both are willing to work, there will be promise ahead.

Aries March 21-April 19 Grab the love potential this week, Aries, because as long as you're willing to take it, it's yours! The more original you can be, the sexier you become. It's really that simple!

Taurus April 20-May 20 Are you ready for a seismic shift in your love life? Well, get ready, Taurus, because ready or not, here it comes!

Don't worry if you don't feel this shift immediately. Just know that it's coming. Soon.

Gemini May 21-June 21 On Thursday, you and your love might enjoy a stimulating conversation about your shared dreams. Then.

after Friday, it looks like the two of you are finally ready to sit down and make some of those lifealtering decisions about your future.

Cancer June 22-July 22 If you and your partner have a vital decision to make together this week, it'll be important to time it right.

Don't even bother near Wednesday-mixed messages will be everywhere! Instead, aim for Saturday. You'll be glad you did.

That's how much money the critically hated "Fantastic Four" reboot made at the box office this weekend. According to ew.com, the movie was expected to debut in the mid-$40 million range. "Fantastic Four" came in behind "Mission: Impossible—Roque Nation" in its second weekend. Tough break. Do you think they'll still make a seguel?

Sense 16?

We're kidding. Kind of. Netflix has renewed its original series "Sense8" for a second season. Along with a video of cast members singing "Happy Birthday" to the series, Netflix tweeted out, "Birthdays are just the beginning. #sense8 is reborn" according to vulture com

THE QUOTE

You know it's really not my area of expertise, but it really upset me. It felt really personal to me. In terms of what's going on in our Congress and why this has been such an ongoing issue is very frustrating.
